4 March 1950

One Communist army is in the Taishan (112-45, 21-15)-Yangchiang area. Another is in the Chungshan-Shunte (113-16, 22-50) area and four are in the Paoan (112-32, 24-54)-Tungkuan (113-46, 23-02)-Hulyang (114-26, 23-05) area. One division is in the Haifeng (115-20, 22-58)-Lufeng (115-38, 22-58) area. One army is in the Swatow area. In addition to the above there are five other armies in Kwangtung4.

26 February 1950

Two hundred troops of the Communist 4 Field Army are stationed in Tihai (112-41, 22-20). They belong to an unknown unit which has its headquarters in Kongmoon (Chiangmen)5.

Guerrilla Belief in Communist Offensive Against Guerrillas

4 March 1950

- 6. Independent guerrillas along the Kwangtung coast have information that the Communists intend an immediate operation against the guerrilla-occupied coastal islands from Swatow to Yangchiang. The Communists are training, and mobilizing junks.6
- The Communist garrison at Yangchiang has been identified as the 43 Division of the 2 Field army and is commanded by CHANG Hsien-yang (張麗語). It is cooperating with a local Communist guerrilla force under CHENG Chin-po (野錦波) against anti-Communist guerrillas.

Comment. Apparently movements in this area are the basis for a current belief that the Communists intend to invade Indochina. As yet this belief does not have sufficient evidence to support it. A more likely supposition is that the regrouping is caused mostly by Hainan invasion plans and partly by the reported supplying of arms by the Chinese Communists to Ho Chi Minh. Other movements and rumors are covered
